The Automating Society Report 2020 was published on October 28 by Bertelsmann Stiftung and AlgorithmWatch. The report presents over 100 use cases of automated decision-making systems, which were compiled by a network of researchers in 16 European countries. The report shows: Even though algorithmic systems are increasingly being used by public administration and private companies, there is still a lack of transparency, oversight and competence.

In this spanish version of the report, we present key country specific findings on Spain.
