

Reinhard Mohn - Founder

In his career spanning over 40 years, Reinhard Mohn, a fifth-generation member of the founding Bertelsmann family, displayed outstanding commitment to developing a company that now ranks at the very pinnacle of global media companies. His courageous attitude to corporate risk, coupled with his farsightedness and good grasp of business, helped him create a life's work with a workforce of more than 100,000 today.

Social and corporate considerations were put on an equal footing when the Bertelsmann Stiftung was founded in 1977. The foundation not only continues the long-standing tradition of socio-political, cultural and social commitment of the Bertelsmann and Mohn founding families, but also aims to safeguard the company's future.

Therefore, Reinhard Mohn transferred 68.8 percent of his capital share in Bertelsmann AG to the Bertelsmann Stiftung on September 16, 1993. However, this transfer of capital shares did not entitle the foundation to exercise voting rights. The voting rights relating to around 90 percent of the share capital, to which solely Reinhard Mohn was entitled, were transferred to the newly founded Bertelsmann Verwaltungsgesellschaft mbH on July 1, 1999.

Mohn's decision to give majority ownership of the company to the non-profit foundation was largely the result of his firm belief that the social responsibility accompanying ownership, as set out by the German constitution, takes precedence over amassing great wealth.
